BACKGROUND ON THE #ARC SERIES

The ASEF Rectors' Conference and Students' Forum (ARC) is the only bi-regional multi-stakeholder dialogue platform for university and student leaders, policy makers, and business representatives to discuss higher education challenges of mutual concern in Asia and Europe.

ARC is recognised as the Official Dialogue Partner of the ASEM Education Ministers Meeting (ASEM ME). Its results, including policy recommendations and research, feed into the preparation of ASEM MEs, which ARC rectors and student representatives are invited to attend. Moreover, ARC is contributing to the 17 Sustainable Development Goals, and it is one of the initial commitments to the Global Action Programme (GAP) on Education for Sustainable Development (ESD).

ARC takes place on a biennial basis alternating between Asia and Europe. It addresses 3 areas in higher education:

- 1) quality and inclusive education
- 2) university governance

Over 296 universities from 51 Asian and European countries have been represented at the ARC conferences since 2008.

TOPIC OF #ARC7

The 17 Sustainable Development Goals are a universal call for action to shape a better future for all. Universities have a key responsibility to tackle complex societal challenges of our times, manifested in these Goals. ARC invites Asian and European higher education and student leaders to share how their organisations contribute to policy development and take action towards the Agenda 2030 and to get inspiration from their peers' strategies.

ARC7 offers a creative space for knowledge exchange on implementing a whole-of-institution approach on sustainable development, teaching the next generation of leaders and thinkers to act sustainably and ethically; conducting research that leads to positive change in our world; and engaging communities outside the walls of academia. The conference also explores how university and student leaders from Asia and Europe can work together towards "a future we want".

ARC7 explores how higher education can take action towards achieving the sustainable development goals on 3 different levels:

- Taking Action at Home – SDGs as Core Pillars of University Governance
- Taking Action at Community Level – SDGs as Drivers of University Social Impact
- Taking Action at International Level – SDGs as a Catalyst to Reorient Internationalisation

SUBTHEMES OF #ARC7

Theme 1 | Taking Action at Home SDGs as Core Pillars of University Governance

*University leaders should support the integration of sustainable development throughout their institution. They should involve all the institutional stakeholders in the development of SD related strategies and include reporting and monitoring mechanisms to keep track of and foster progress. This was recommended by the International Association of Universities (IAU) to university leaders based on the findings of the survey titled *Higher Education Paving the Way to Sustainable Development: A Global Perspective*¹ in 2017.*

This ARC7 theme discusses what strategies can institutions adopt to make SDGs a core part of their everyday practice. Possible questions to be addressed are:

- What visions and strategies work in promoting sustainable development at universities?
- How do we justify the contribution to the global public good in view of rising pressures to focus on the benefits of the own country, industries, to deliver the research and the skills that society needs today?
- How can internal and national quality assurance systems serve and enhance SDGs in university governance?
- What are the challenges of implementing sustainability strategies in higher education and how can be success measured when there are no "one-size-fits-all" indicators?

Theme 2 | Taking Action at Community Level SDGs as Drivers of University Societal Impact

Universities can enhance sustainability in their social, economic and environmental dimensions by delivering education and research to communities. However, social sustainability has had considerably less attention in public dialogue than economic and environmental sustainability. Although in Europe, for example, a growing number of universities collaborate not only with employers (90%), but also with local communities

¹ VAN'T LAND, Hilligje; HERZOG, Frédérique. Higher Education Paving the Way to Sustainable Development: A Global Perspective (2016). IAU, September 2017. <https://www.iau-aiu.net/IMG/pdf/higher-education-paving-the-way-to-sd-iau-2017.pdf>

(88%), primary and secondary schools (87%), and vocational institutions (73%)², the current and potential role of SDGs in these partnerships is less emphasized.

This ARC7 theme discusses how universities engage in joint knowledge production and research beyond the campus, for the benefit of the community in Asia and Europe. Possible questions to be addressed are:

- What kind of partnerships with which actors are working to increase social impact?
- How do universities influence local communities through SDGs to inspire sustainable development actions?
- How can the global goals be translated to local and university strategies?
- How can sustainable research, teaching and community engagement projects be financed?

Theme 3 | Taking Action at International Level SDGs as Catalysts to Reorient Internationalisation

Internationalization is high on the agenda of universities, most often targeting student learning and student mobility, according to the findings of the 4th Global Survey on Internationalization of Higher Education carried out by IAU³. Student and staff learning should be central to any internationalization partnership process. Indeed, internationalization, including at home, should be shaped to foster international exchange and understanding. When linked to mobility, internationalization comes with a variety of challenges. Often motivated by funding, academic standards, language, recognition of foreign qualifications, it is also often challenged by perceived or real social and cultural barriers⁴. These dimensions are of joint concern for both Asia and Europe. Student and staff mobility between the two regions is notably imbalanced - about 1,5 times more Asian students study in Europe than Europeans in Asia⁵. Knowledge mobility is equally unbalanced. Yet open dialogue and exchange between knowledge systems is conducive to new and innovative approaches to many challenges we face and share.

This track of ARC7 explores how internationalization related activities, could be reoriented to help address the SDGs. Possible questions to be addressed are:

- What kind of international partnerships do universities engage in (Why? To what end?)? What is the shared purpose of these? Do they, and if so how do they contribute to addressing the SDGs?
- What do students and staff get out of these partnerships in terms of teaching, research, and further international understanding?
 - More equitable and ethical cooperation in international relations
 - Better understanding of Asia and Europe
 - Defining learning gain and its contribution to sustainability
- How can universities better promote intercultural learning and dialogue to explore regional cultural richness, and to optimize regional development?

Expected Outputs

Policy Recommendations

- The participants of the Rectors' Conference will discuss a set of Policy Recommendations prepared by the partner organizations of ARC (EUA, IAU, AUN) in collaboration with a focus group of rectors from Asia and Europe, and the finalized content will be delivered to the 7th ASEM Education Ministers' Meeting (ASEM ME7).
- The Students' Forum participants will develop another set of Policy Recommendations for the ASEM Education Ministers based on the skills they acquire during the preparation period and based on the knowledge they exchange.

VISUAL CONCEPT

The United Nations General Assembly identified 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) that encompass many aspects of contemporary society. The goals serve as globally-recognised standards that call upon stakeholders across all sectors, including education, to implement them by 2030. Achieving the SDGs, however, is a complex interplay that requires both strategic thinking as well as creative and innovative methods. Solving a Rubik's cube - one of the most famous educational toys ever - resembles this multifaceted process: it takes not only analytical skills and imagination but also hands-on action in solving the puzzle to get all the colours, sides and patterns right within the given time. Like the pieces in a Rubik's cube, the SDGs are interconnected and any decision to move towards a certain direction has an impact on the overall pattern and outcome. The 7th ASEF Rector's Conference and Students' Forum (ARC7) is the platform for students, rectors, policy-makers and education ministers to showcase the interdisciplinary role of higher education in this serious game of developing and sustaining our societies. While the optimal solution may not be the easiest nor the quickest, we know we are moving the pieces in the right order by taking turns in drafting policy recommendations and making commitments towards the SDGs at ARC7.
